Symposium in focus

In order to bring the profound regulative effect of Rhythmic Massage Therapy, which is based on a targeted therapeutic intervention, up to a scientific level, a corresponding research programme is required.

Why RMT in particular?

As a body-soul therapy, it has a regulating effect on rhythmic processes, the cardiovascular/lung-ventilation system and thus on mental and physical health. Confidence and well-being in one's own body are the qualities of the sense of life that enable people to achieve self-determination, self-knowledge and the ability to act on their own responsibility.

- Various workshops will complement the thematic framework of the main lectures.
- The focus will be on the physiological processes of the human organism and their clinical relevance in terms of current scientific research.
- The evening panel discussions will explore these themes in greater depth from a variety of expert perspectives.
